二、报告目录及图表目录

摘要The recent discovery of oil is set to bring Chad some of the foreign investment it urgently needs to upgrade its telecom facilities and other infrastructure. The country has some of the world's lowest penetration rates for fixed-line, mobile and Internet services. Competition exists only in the mobile sector between two privately owned networks. The fixed-line incumbent's network is running at its capacity limit which, along with high prices, has also hampered the development of the Internet sector. One of the mobile operators has embarked on seizing this opportunity by introducing mobile data services.
